

Full-time Faculty Positions

The Institute for the Psychological Sciences invites applications for full-time faculty positions beginning Fall 2010.

The Institute is a free-standing, professional school offering M.S. and Psy.D. degrees in clinical psychology. The Institute is committed to the fruitful integration of sound science and effective practice in psychology with a Catholic perspective on the nature of the person, marriage, family, and the moral life.

Essential Qualifications and Responsibilities

We are looking for both entry-level (including new graduates) and mid-career psychologists who are interested in learning about an integrated Catholic approach to psychology, and in training and forming future generations of psychologists through their teaching and research. New faculty will have significant opportunities for professional development in learning with colleagues about integrating psychology with the Catholic faith.

We seek applicants who are either license-eligible in the state of Virginia or who will be eligible within one year. Applicants should demonstrate interests and competencies in teaching in the areas of psychotherapy and psychological assessment.

Duties also include academic and dissertation advising, and some administrative responsibilities. Rank of appointment and salary will be commensurate with qualifications.

Applications are currently being reviewed and will be accepted until the positions are filled. Send letter of interest and curriculum vita to wncordling@ipsciences.edu or mail to:

Chair
Committee on Faculty Recruitment
The Institute for the Psychological Sciences
2001 Jefferson Davis Highway, Suite 511
Arlington, VA 22202

IPS is an Equal Opportunity Employer. Website: www.ipsciences.edu